

Importing goods into the EU –what REACH means for you

CIA offices, London, or a location to suit you

Who should attend?

If you have been receiving letters from your customers about SVHCs and wondering what to do, then this workshop is ideal for you. It will be of value to business and regulatory managers who are, or who will be, managing the REACH compliance activities for their company.

This day is aimed at importers of goods, either for further assembly or as finished products to be sold within the EU, who need to gain a better understanding of their obligations under REACH.

Why attend?

If you import or sell goods in the EU, whether they are finished products or components to be used in further assembly, then you may well be thinking that a law governing chemicals in the EU has nothing to do with you... we're afraid to say you'd be wrong!

The REACH Regulation applies in certain cases to "articles", which means pretty much anything that isn't a chemical: clothing, furniture, motor vehicle parts etc. Every product is made from substances, and substances in articles need to be "registered" if they are intended to be released.

As part of REACH, the publication of the first candidate list of substances of very high concern (SVHC) has raised fears amongst importers and suppliers of how to identify articles which may contain 0.1% of a substance on the list.

In this workshop we will bring you the very latest information on what REACH means for articles and explain what you need to do to comply. We'll also provide you with some tips on what to tell your customers and when.
